

Caring Careers Start Here.

Not too long before the COVID-19 epidemic hit our state, Minnesota was already facing a serious shortage of workers in senior care.

Current social distancing and other preventative measures have led to high unemployment in other industries, especially the hospitality and restaurant industry.

These dislocated workers and many others seeking work may be qualified and interested in healthcare careers, but there is no central place for which a job-seeker can be directed to pursue positions available in senior care.

A rapid response is needed.

Two of Minnesota's largest senior care associations have collaborated to provide a central location for individuals interested in senior care jobs. A sampling of available positions include:

Nursing Assistants Culinary Preparation and Service Housekeepers
